Dear Friends,

2020 was a year like no other. A global pandemic. Yet another economic crisis. Social and political unrest. While there are reasons to be hopeful, it likely will be some months until there is a return to “normalcy” in the U.S. and around the world.

Despite the turmoil, the National Institute on Retirement Security (NIRS) continued its work. The team quickly pivoted to working from home, delivered timely pandemic and economic information to stakeholders, and continued to produce important retirement research products. We are especially pleased to have leveraged technology to drive up virtual engagement with members and stakeholders – up nearly 500% percent as compared to 2019.

As events unfolded this year, the so-called “K-shaped” economic recovery has exposed the financial fragility of too many American households. It is encouraging that policymakers are adopting emergency measures to help lessen the financial pain, such as targeted economic stimulus payments, business loans and eviction moratoriums. But these are costly, short-term remedies. Once we are through the pandemic, the long-term harm to Americans’ financial security will be laid bare. Already we know that in 2020, gross domestic product decreased by 3.5 percent from the prior year – the worst decline since 1946.

While the future still remains murky, one thing is certain: retirement will be even harder for too many Americans. Unemployment levels remain stubbornly high and many businesses continue to fail. Concerns also are emerging that the health impacts of COVID-19 could be long-term for many people, which could impact workers’ future earning potential. And the pandemic seems to be a force multiplier of our pre-existing racial, gender and economic inequalities.

Now more than ever, we are firmly committed to doing our part to rebuild the nation’s retirement infrastructure and to serve as a strong voice for retirement security. Our research and education programs will be all the more important as policymakers here in Washington, D.C. and at the state and local levels grapple with an even more challenging retirement outlook.

One silver lining of the pandemic’s financial havoc could be policies that make it easier and less expensive for workers to prepare for retirement. In fact, at her confirmation hearing this month, Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen pledged to help more workers save for retirement. And retirement seems to remain one of the few areas with bipartisan agreement regarding the challenges we face.

Other silver linings of COVID-19 have been a focus on simple pleasures and time at home. It’s also given an added appreciation to everyday activities that I know I took for granted – sending our children to school, attending professional and social events, enjoying dinner in a restaurant with friends, spending time with extended family for birthdays and holidays, and connecting in-person with co-workers and colleagues.

As we start anew in 2021, we hope this report provides a useful recap of our work last year. We are deeply appreciative of the steadfast support of our members, especially during uncertainty in 2020. And, we look forward to our continued work together as we find ways to address our nation’s retirement shortcomings.

We wish you, your colleagues and your families safety, good health and happiness in 2021. And we cannot wait to see you in person soon.

Kind regards,

Dan Doonan

EVENTS

11th Annual Retirement Policy Conference

On March 2-3, 2020, NIRS held the 11th Annual Retirement Policy Conference, 2020 Vision: The Future of Retirement. This member-exclusive event welcomed about 150 professionals from the retirement community for a two-day event in Washington, DC. Attendees heard from a wide list of speakers, including: Alissa Quart, author of Squeezed: Why Our Families Can't Afford America; Dr. Shannon Ferrell, Oklahoma State University; Dr. Christian Weller, University of Massachusetts Boston; Elaine Ryan, AARP; Dr. Juliette Cubanski, Kaiser Family Foundation; Dr. Brian Perlman, Greenwald & Associates; and Tim Abrams, Kentucky Retired Teachers Association.

Insights and Impact Visionary Circle Meeting

Every fall, NIRS convenes a meeting of Visionary Circle members and NIRS staff and board members. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this event was held virtually for the first time. On November 9, 2020, nearly 40 representatives from NIRS Visionary Circle member organizations joined us from across the country for a discussion on the future direction of NIRS research.
PROVIDING CONTENT IN A VIRTUAL WORLD

Webinars

Following the move to virtual events in March, NIRS launched our Special Webinar Series to continue to inform and engage the retirement community. In 2020, NIRS hosted 22 webinars for nearly 3,000 attendees on topics including the economic impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, employee retirement preparedness, state-sponsored retirement savings programs, and proposed changes to actuarial standards. All webinars are archived on our website and YouTube channel so that members, policymakers, and other key players in retirement security can continue to refer to these resources.

Speaking Engagements

In 2020, NIRS staff spoke at 18 conferences, meetings, and workshops hosted by various organizations, including the Florida Public Pension Trustees Association, Government Finance Officers Association, National Academy of Social Insurance, National Association of Police Organizations, and the National Education Association. Though all events after the first quarter of the year were virtual, NIRS experts were still able to speak on important retirement security topics.

Media

NIRS research was cited over 1,500 times in the media in 2020. Our research was featured in local, trade, and national news outlets, including The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, The New York Times, Fox Business, CNBC, Forbes, Kiplingers, and Bloomberg. NIRS continues to share research organically on social media via Twitter, Facebook, and LinkedIn, with increased followers and engagement on each platform.

At the end of 2020, Dan Doonan, executive director of NIRS, signed on to be a Forbes contributor on retirement security matters. He will publish one to two columns per month on pertinent issues and new research.

Our Mission

The National Institute on Retirement Security is a non-profit research and education organization established to contribute to informed policymaking by fostering a deep understanding of the value of retirement security to employees, employers, and the economy as a whole.

Our Vision

Through our activities, NIRS seeks to encourage the development of public policies that enhance retirement security in America. Our vision is one of a retirement system that simultaneously meets the needs of employers, employees, and the public interest. That is, one where:

- employers can offer affordable, high quality retirement benefits that help them achieve their human resources goals;
- employees can count on a secure source of retirement income that enables them to maintain a decent living standard after a lifetime of work; and
- the public interest is well-served by retirement systems that are managed in ways that promote fiscal responsibility, economic growth, and responsible stewardship of retirement assets.

Our Approach

- High-quality research that informs the public debate on retirement policy. The research program focuses on the role ad value of defined benefit pension plans for employers, employees, and the public at large. We also conduct research on policy approaches and other innovative strategies to expand broad based retirement security.
- Education programs that disseminate our research findings broadly. NIRS disseminates its research findings to the public, policy makers, and the media by distributing reports, conducting briefings, and participating in conferences and other public forums.
- Outreach to partners and key stakeholders. By building partnerships with other experts in the field of retirement research and with stakeholders that support retirement security, we leverage the impact of our research and education efforts. Our outreach activities also improve the capacity of government agencies, non-profits, the private sector, and others working to promote and expand retirement security.
The National Institute on Retirement Security is a non-profit, non-partisan organization established to contribute to informed policy making by fostering a deep understanding of the value of retirement security to employees, employers, and the economy as a whole. NIRS works to fulfill this mission through research, education, and outreach programs that are national in scope.
